THE USMS CONVENTION: A ROOKIE'S PERSPECTIVE

by Rich Burns

Like most of the 23,000 masters swimmers, I dutifully paid my registration, worked out, went to a smattering of meets and otherwise pretty much took for granted the organization called Masters Swimming. Because it's my business and a strong appeal was made to my altruism, I agreed to help produce the 1987 Masters Calendar. This effort and my inquisitive nature landed me as a delegate seat to the 1986 National Convention. I assumed the position had solely to do with my calendar connections and was strictly ceremonial, so I paid little attention to getting ready.

The Masters Swimming annual gathering is held in conjunction with that of United States Aquatic Sports, an organization that includes water polo, diving, synchronized swimming, age group and senior swimming, as well as masters. About 1,000 people representing these sports attend. To say it's a big swimming deal is an understatement and naturally there's a measure of protocol attendant with attending. A variety of papers began arriving at my house with schedules and programs, agendas and addenda, and a whole raft of rules and regulations to review. These were conveniently ignored, set aside to be dealt with in due course.

My delegate status also included representation on my local swimming organization (Pacific Masters) and the week of the convention I attended my first gathering of this group. The agenda included a review of the material I had been collecting and which, it turned out, was to be the substance of the convention. Before the night was over I had an initiation to the organized side of organized swimming and realized I better get serious about my pending duties and obligations.

My cramming on the plane to Ft. Worth only served to confuse me further and the distinction between clubs and teams, associations and zones, LMSC's and MSC's became as rarefied as the air I was flying through. My colleagues who had experienced previous conventions warned of the politics, personal passions and obfuscation of issues I was about to experience.

The purpose of the convention is to deal with the very real concepts of running what is a vast, complex and demanding network of swimming devotees. Masters swimming is a highly structured organization attending to a program which allows 23,000 people to train, compete, communicate and grow. It manages a $175,000 budget, establishes and monitors our rules for behavior and performance, compiles records, structures competitions, coaches our coaches, does medical research, chronicles our history, registers our registrants, liases with our sister sports and countries, recognizes achievements, and ensures our insurance. Not, however, with some concessions to bureaucracy.

I quickly realized that this was the first real convention in my life as I came to know the true meaning of parliamentary procedure. Ayes and nays, moves and seconds, calls for questions, motions and tabling were dutifully exercised as points of order became points of confusion.

The agenda calls for two days of committee meetings followed by one and a half days of general session. Committee meetings are long and cover many issues. They are chaired with various degrees of effectiveness and generally manage to address their complete agendas. Each committee has about a dozen appointed members who are the only ones allowed to vote.

The remainder of convention attendees are allowed to sit in and freely participate, but positions on the points under consideration are the purview of the committee. Committee results are reported to the general session for ratification or rejection.

After attending my appointed committees, I observed that Masters Swimming is a well-oiled machine. Everyone knew what needed to be accomplished and set about doing it. This is a highly qualified, highly motivated, compulsive and zealous, select group who are truly representing the needs and desires of their constituency. They take their responsibility very seriously and are intent on making Masters Swimming as good as it can be. I did, however, mention latent bureaucracy and it reared its head more than a few times. Particularly among the lawyers.

The demographic profile of Masters Swimming is extremely impressive. Highly educated, highly successful, well trained and well placed, many of our members are professionals and the convention delegation lacked not for lawyers. Lawyers and parliamentary procedure, it seems, produce a form of legal frenzy. Countless times the lawyers caucused and clarified, objected and corrected, interpreted and advised, and at a point it became a source of amusement to the congregation whenever a lawyer stepped forward to offer divine guidance on a point of consideration. My initial impression was that Masters Swimming is an organization that is just fine "thank you" and it is only the peculiar effects of the group dynamic which caused non-issues to become issues and issues to engender passion.

Despite the depths of emotion, however, much gets done. Two championship meet sites were selected, countless rules were amended, budgets were allocated, new programs were conceived, organized and initiated, plans for future growth and the management thereof were postulated. The annual success of Masters Swimming is assured and the delegates assume their charges for the future.

Many things stand out about this fascinating group:

- * Masters Swimming is a wholly volunteer effort save for one modestly paid director.
- * The level of commitment, energy and contribution by the delegates and committees is inordinate.
- * Everyone loves the sport and loves their involvement.
- * Everyone is selflessly looking out for the best interests of 23,000 members.
- * It's the best value a $5.00 registration fee will ever buy.

Before leaving for the convention my coach admonished that I remember we swim for fun. In some of the thornier proceedings this concept might have been temporarily forgotten, but as it amends there was no lack of festivities. Banquets, receptions, parties and socials, hospitality suites (one a boisterous six hour marathon of dirty jokes) punctuated the proceedings and nightly forays to Billy Bob's, the world's largest cowboy bar, produced many bleary eyes at the early morning meetings.

I went away from the convention with a new found appreciation for Masters Swimming. It's an organization intact and under exceptional stewardship. Will that make me swim faster? I doubt it.

FIRST PLACETOM LYNDON

Variations on the Sets Theme.. Let's delve into some of the endless variations that can be easily spun off for sets, or "repeats", as some call them. The variations all come from changing one or more of the elements in the set.

1. DISTANCE: How far you swim each time
2. NUMBER OF SWIMS: How many times you swim it.
3. INTERVAL: The time it takes you to swim the distance plus the time you rest between each swim.
4. SPEED: How fast you swim. This 4th element ends up being a function of the first 3, if you swim as fast as you can, considering the demands of distance, number of swims, and rest.

Many variations simply increase or decrease the first three elements. For instance, one of my favorite sets for tuning my 100 yard speed is swimming 4 x 100 on 4 (meaning I swim 100 yards 4 times, starting each 100 4 minutes after starting the previous 100). Today, at the Tufts workout, Coach Don Megerle, who is my idea of a fine coach for Masters swimmers, included a set of 10 x 100 on 4 1/2. I immediately recognized a potentially difficult set and I was right. The problem for me was that I didn't know what speed I could hold (average) for the 10. As it turned out I started the 100's too fast, held that speed for first 5, and then staggered through the last 5 an average of 4 seconds slower. And the last 5 hurt considerably more, too.

Yes, some of those who think any rest more than 30 seconds is goofing off wonder what's the point of so much rest. I think the answer is that, with this very long rest, you are able to start each 100 relatively rested but run out of gas and into fairly severe fatigue somewhere before the end. Learning to deal with this rapid and repeated buildup of fatigue is one of the main reasons for doing sets. I like the 10 x 100 on 4 1/2 set and will use it from time to time in my workouts. Don called it a "benchmark" set. I took that to mean that it is a good one for gauging your condition. I am looking forward to faster times when I swim it next. I will make one important adjustment, though. I'll hold back a second or two in the first 5 in hopes of not fading in the last 5.

Swimming 10 x 100 instead of 4 x 100 is a variation. Swimming 10 on 2 minutes is a variation. Swimming 10 x 50 yards is a variation. Only your level of input of imagination, energy and interest puts limits on what you can do with sets. If you wish, you can have a different workout for every day. Some write down their workout for the day and take it to the pool on a 3 x 5 card. While variety may be the spice of workout life for some, I'm more comfortable with a handful of tried and true sets that I carry in my head. Either extreme or any of the stops along the way work, so do it your way, but do it.

Two of Don Megerle's Workouts

October 19th. 4500 yards. 2 Hours.

Warmup

- ~Swim 200 Choice (any stroke).
- ~Fly kick 4 x 50, with 10 seconds rest between 50's.
- ~Rest.
- ~IM 4 x 100 on 2 (some will use a longer rest interval).
- ~Pull 400, using a pull buoy.

Work Sets

- ~Swim 6 x 150 on 3 1/2, with each 50 within each 150 faster than the previous 50. (This is called accelerating, descending, or speeding up)
- ~Swim 50 easy backstroke.
- ~Flipper kick 1 x 500, alternating slow and fast 25's.
- ~Swim 50 backstroke easy.
- ~Swim 6 x 100 on 2. Swim 1-3 (the first 3) at a not too challenging pace. Accelerate 4-6 (the last 3)(swim the 5th faster than the 4th and the 6th faster than the 5th).
- ~Pull 10 x 50 Breaststroke on 1 1/2. Accelerate last 2.
- ~Pull 300, using a pull buoy.
- ~Swim 9 x 25, descending by 3's. (Swim the 2nd faster than the 1st the 3rd faster than the 2nd, then the 4th at the 1st speed, etc.)

Warmdown

- ~Swim 200 Choice.

October 26. 3500 yards. 2 Hours.

Warmup

- ~Swim 800 Choice.
- ~Flipper Kick 200 IM.
- ~Swim 4 x 25 on 45. Accelerate each 25 (each 25 faster than the previous 25)

Work Sets

- ~Swim 10 x 100 on 4 1/2. "Keep at 90%" (swim fairly close to maximum effort).
- Swim an easy 50 between each 100.
- ~Flipper kick 1 x 400. Alternate slow and fast 25's.
- ~Swim 50 backstroke easy.
- ~Swim 6 x 25. 1-4 at moderate pace. Accelerate through 5 and 6 to all out on 6th. Whistle start to sharpen reflexes.

Warmdown

- ~Swimmers' Choice.
